

Terms of use

Version: 1.0

Last updated: 24 August 2026

Acceptable use of the website, API and materials.

Permitted use

Viewing, searching, source links, small private integrations and reasonable read-only API use are permitted when limits and caching are respected.

Prohibited use

Do not bypass rate or access controls, seek private data, run load attacks, send malicious payloads or spam, submit applications at scale, impersonate an employer or violate third-party rights.

API and availability

The public API has no SLA and may change, be limited or be disabled for security. Do not create a critical dependency without a separate agreement.

Changes and suspension

Continued use after a published revision constitutes acceptance where legally effective. Abusive access may be suspended.

Lawful access

Collection may target public material or systems covered by permission, contract, licence, an owned test environment or another lawful basis. Credential theft, authentication or paywall bypass, system interference, extraction of a substantial protected database and processing personal data without a legal basis are prohibited.

Content and notices

Vacancy text and marks remain the property of their owners. The service stores structured descriptions and source links for search and pipeline demonstration, does not endorse an employer, and may remove records after notice or on its own initiative.

Governing rules

The law of the operator's place of establishment and mandatory rules applicable to the user and data processing apply. Parties should first attempt written resolution. Nothing removes a person's right to contact a court or supervisory authority.